To The U.S. Postal Regulatory Commission:

I wish to add my voice to the growing clamor to have Louis DeJoy removed from his position as Postmaster General. His plan to reduce the deficit is Draconian, and will not save the USPS but destroy it. Raising expenses, slowing service, lowering standards: these will all reduce efficiency and, perhaps worse, destroy the relationship people have with the USPS.

I urge you to rethink DeJoy's 10 year plan, and if you can't arrive at a more equitable solution, consider removing yourselves as well.

Sincerely,

David Kappy
